THE HOOK

Every episode ends on an event. Sex, secrets, a burning trailer, a deputy with something to hide, and lights over a drilling rig that nobody can explain.

The mystery has a real answer, and the audience gets one piece of it every 90 seconds.

LOGLINE

After a fire kills the most loved man in a trailer park, five people carry five pieces of what really happened. One fact comes out per episode, until the last one: it was never an accident.

DOUBLE WIDE Desires

THE STORY

Brittany Thorne got out. She married money, moved into a marble house across town, and never went back to the trailer park she grew up in, except at night, to see Wade.

When Wade's trailer burns with him inside it, the town calls it an accident: old park, bad gas lines. Brittany knows better. Wade had a bag packed and was waiting for her. Somebody ran out the back of his trailer that night, and the deputy who was first on the scene carried something out of the smoke wrapped in his jacket.

To find out who killed the man she loved, Brittany has to dig through the ashes of the life she left, and she has to do it without her husband finding out where she goes at night. Every episode brings one more person who knows something and one more fact. Over all of it, lights hang above the drilling rig on the edge of the park.

THE PEOPLE

BRITTANY THORNE She left the park and married rich. Her secret lover just burned to death.

WADE The park handyman everybody loved, and the last holdout against the buyout.

GRANT THORNE Brittany's husband. Patient, polished, and asking a lot of questions about where she has been.

CALEB Sheriff's deputy, her first love, and the first man into the smoke.

LILA MAE Her oldest friend, who told her to wait until morning.

RAY The park's livestreamer. He has filmed lights over the rig every night they drill.

MASON Wade's best friend since the third grade, gone the morning after the fire.

JESSE Caleb's wife, who heard half a phone call she can't forget.

THE MAN IN THE POLO He runs the night crew at the rig, and he knows Caleb by name.
